1. The BEX IV Program Cost Summary – Activity through January 31, 2018
   a. Melissa Coan provided an overview of the BEX IV program cost for the activity through January 31, 2018. In summary, the programs are in the black and spending is as anticipated.
   b. Ms. Coan spent time explaining the reserves and project budgets, stating there is a major reserve reported monthly; facilities' reserves are tracked quarterly. Reserve money is set aside for potential budget issues, i.e., Queen Anne or Bagley. Budget transfers are subject to Board approval.
   c. Currently, because of the Seattle high construction climate, reserves are being kept for projects that are not yet bid. Because there are many school projects across Washington school districts, there is a lot of competition for school contractors.
   d. Steve Tatge stated that it would be good if at some time SPS could use reserves for enhancement of the current projects.
   e. John Palewicz remarked that in this point of time the budget is good news, but that the contingency is really spent down and should be monitored carefully.
2. Melissa Coan reviewed the BTA IV Program Cost Summary – Activity through January 31, 2018
   a. Melissa Coan provided an overview of the BTA IV program cost for the activity through January 31, 2018.
b. The focus on this report will be the major project sites, e.g., E.C. Hughes, Magnolia, Webster and Ingraham High School.

c. There was discussion around bundling like projects together. Steve Tatge stated that the UW is looking at bundling like projects together as one project and letting the design builder consider the sequence. Five buildings are allowed for the design build. Mr. Best stated that presently, at Franklin High School, the doors and windows' projects are combined, but do not include the electrical project there. Mr. Best stated that he would like more conversation around this topic in the future.
